We promise this will be one of the best night skies you've ever seen and if you're lucky you might even chance upon some shooting stars.

On full moon nights, you will set off on a short walk to admire the surrounding landscapes before settling in to view the night sky. On darker nights however, the tour will solely be focused on stars and constellations.

As you immerse yourself in nature, a grilled dinner will be prepared for you which you will feast on around a campfire.

This will truly be a night to remember.

TABUK

TABUK

Tabuk, the capital city of the Tabuk region in northwestern Saudi Arabia, has long been a resting point for Jordanian and Egyptian pilgrims. Its rich culture can be felt in Souq Twaheen, famed for selling patterned rugs and goat-hair tent covers. Visitors flock to Tabuk to explore ancient archaeological sites and the setting of the story of the prophet Moses, who lived east of the city for a decade. Marking the start of the Saudi Coast, Tabuk's charming coastal towns, such as Haql and Sharma, offer clear seas and pristine beaches. But there are more terrains to explore: Consider checking out the carved tombs of Maghaer Shuaib in the desert, or the Moses Springs near Maqna, where natural springs flow under date palms. Or the stunning Tayeb Al Ism, a valley of steep granite stones separated from the turquoise-fringed Gulf of Aqaba by only the road.

There are spectacular fortresses all around Tabuk, but this imposing castle in the center of town might be the oldest. It's known to date from 1559, though some claim there was a fortress here as early as 3500 B.C. Inside its walls, two mosques are linked by courtyards, stairwells and watchtowers, and there's a small museum detailing the history of the castle and the wider city — from the great explorers who visited, like Ibn Battuta, to the caravans of pilgrims who would stop to drink from its wells on their way to Makkah and Medina.

The rocks sit on two small natural pedestals measuring 6 meters high and 9 meters wide. The rock sculpture features a lot of bizarre characteristics, which remain a mystery until today. First, the rock is divided in the middle by a perfectly straight gap which seemed impossible to be done by ancient humans. The way the rocks are connected to the pedestals also appears to be floating in perfect balance. Moreover, the side of the rock facing southeast is filled with numerous petroglyphs or rock engraving which depicts Arabian horses, humans, and ibexes. These petroglyphs are thought to be at least 4,000 years old, suggesting the presence of human inhabitants who thrived during the Bronze Age.
